

Dear Sir

for Britain

Now the cruel situation has been nobly defended by your correspondent in today's Albertan I wish to take exception to his idea of War and the children. Again I say what does children from four years old to twelve know or what should they know about War. The further we can keep this from their young minds the better. As in years to come when we are living a normal life again our neighbors will be the Japs the Germans and the other races who care to mingle in this great country of ours. Then we hope that race stigma which has been a curse for generation will be eliminated. Educating children in War tends to breed War. Therefore let us teach children the Golden rule. Love thy neighbor as thyself. And perhaps we will find a more human ideal. Children are very sensitive. And the young mind never forgets the struggle going on in their homes when there is a shortage of the necessities of life. Their parents are powerless to keep harmony when the wage earner is idle. And that is where we turn to the Labour situation ahead of us. Many laborers homes today are sheltering old fathers and mothers who are in the way. And the children see their parents express bitter resentment towards grandma or Grandpa who probably is crippled with Bronchial trouble or Arthritis unable to help themselves and who has been forced to accept a helping hand in the shelter of their childrens homes. Something which our Government should take into consideration when they are doling out the miserable pittance of fifty five cents per day to keep these old people. It is not that war is better. We consider it a disgrace of the lowest kind. When we read about the enormous distribution should be abolished and a more suitable distribution take its place. Labor knows what it has been up against in the past and fears the tomorrow and rightly so Our Government should immediately slice the top notch of these unscrupulous Corporations and do it now so the workers who are sacrificing everything would be in the years to come protected from the lot of their parents before them. Pensions for the aged should be doubled and the money taken from the profits mentioned above. To relieve our tired soldiers from having to face the home life mentioned when he their late years. And I fail to notice any of our service clubs going out of their way to create any enthusiasm in seeing the Government wake up to this very urgent need of our people who deserve better treatment and who are ready to accept the more scientific distribution of the necessities of life. And are
